2. The briefing covered an overview of the Pakistani internal scene, including speculation that President Zia would hold national elections, as promised, in March 1985. The briefers noted that Zia is unlikely to face a significant, united political opposition. The economy has hit a slowdown, mainly due to falling remittances from Pakistanis employed in the Middle East, but the GNP continues to grow at an acceptable rate. The briefing then turned to military procurement and a discussion of arms deliveries [redacted]
